BRAND PURPOSE

To provide structure.

Origin Story: Glee Fro Girl is founded by a mother of 3, who raised her children in Australia, without family or a support network, Glee Fro Girl therefore recognises and empathises with the pressures carried by modern day Mum's and Dad's, of school-aged children. Glee Fro Girl has identified that particularly, for parents of girls with afro-textured hair, something as simple as styling their daughters hair every day, can easily become a burdensome challenge.

Afro-hair is high maintenance because it is time consuming to manage. For that reason, many parents prefer to have their daughters hair braided on a regular basis. The problem is that braiding is widely accepted as being a 'protective style' yet statistics show that African women are the highest sufferers of serious conditions like Alopecia. Hair braiding can often also be painful experience that can take hours to complete - depending on the style..

The braiding culture allows hair to appear neat and tidy for up to a few months at a time. The time investment is much more manageable for busy parents. The greatest cost of this practice, however, is that from an early age, children subconsciously learn to reject a part of their beauty and ultimately, themselves. On the other hand, the afro's natural appearance when neglected can quickly be seen as unkempt, which, if brought to the child's attention, can deeply hurt the child's self image.

Glee Fro Girl desires to offer a natural approach to hair styling which we believe is physically and emotionally healthier for our girls, while at the same time, supporting parents in a way that is practical.

Tagline: "Children's Natural Hair Styling Services."
Slogan: "Real self love starts with her real hair."
